

Joseph Rhea is a scientist, science fiction author, computer game designer, and believer in moving humanity forward, not backward. Advised by his high school English teacher to pursue a life of writing, he instead chose a career in engineering and science, driven by a need to explore the world and help create new technologies. Now he has come full circle and is using that experience to become a new voice in science fiction.

His first novel, the 2008 techno-thriller, Cyberdrome, is a fast-paced story that follows rogue programmer, Alek Grey, into a computer-generated virtual world to rescue the love of his life. However, once inside he discovers that he has been lied to by people he trusted, and may not make it out alive.

His newest book, Novum Chronicles, is a massive, 600-page, dystopian undersea saga that thrusts you below the surface of an alien water planet, as a young cargo-sub captain named Jacob Stone inadvertently awakens an ancient enemy that could destroy what's left of the human race. Will this be humanity's final apocalypse? Learn more at JosephRhea.com